The Festival released a memo on May 21 announcing the exciting change of plans for this year.

"On April 21st, the North Ridgeville Corn Festival announced that due to issues involved with the COVID-19 pandemic, namely the uncertainty of the COVID-19 restrictions at the time of the festival and lack of sufficient planning time, the Corn Festival Committee felt that it would not be possible to put the event on this year," reports John Butkowski, President, The North Ridgeville Corn Festival Committee.

"With the recent lifting of the restrictions by the governor and discussion with the Lorain County Health Dept., the committee met and are pleased to announce

by Kelly Gulick

My mother was dying for a loving touch. She was living in a local care center that during the pandemic had a policy of no in-person visitation. For 10 months residents were confined to their rooms.

At 86 years old, Mom was incontinent, legally blind, and not able to walk, but her condition was stable. During the pandemic she had service touching to meet basic needs, but no one sat and held her hand or lovingly brushed her hair as we had previously on our daily visits. The phone was her lifeline, but staff often forgot to place it within her reach. For Mom, a retired teacher and a social butterfly, the isolation was like solitary confinement.

One day in late December 2020 I called my cousin and kindred spirit, Georgia Awig. She is a registered nurse, a Kent State graduate with a BSN, and a good listener with experience as a patient advocate. I complained to her about not being able to provide Mom the care she deserved. That discussion started us down a path—taking Mom out of the care center and into a Redwood apartment—with me as primary caregiver and Georgia as local resource.

We needed a place with handicapped access that was easy for friends and family to find. Georgia toured Redwood Apartments North Ridgeville complex on Bagley Road. There was an apartment that met our requirements! The open floor plan and hardwood floors allowed me to easily move Mom's wheelchair. The living room was large enough to accommodate the necessary medical equipment and a large chair for my brother to be comfortable during his daily visits. It had two bedrooms; one for me, and one for overnight guests or hospice aides. The Redwood staff was so welcoming that we immediately felt comfortable putting the rest of the steps into action.

Moving a family member from an institution to home-based care is a big commitment, and not every family can make this transition. My husband and sons supported this venture. I quit my job as a teacher and put on hold my fledgling sewing business. Family and friends helped me move and set up furniture, and called often to offer help and support. Georgia was a regular visitor; Mom told us details of our family history and about our mothers' lives as sisters growing up. My brother adjusted his schedule to visit every day and held Mom's hand as they shared memories or napped. A local hos-

Preparation time will be a challenge, reports Butkowski. “Due to the relative short time to organize the event and the fact that we have a shortage of volunteers, it will not be an easy task,” he says. “The Corn Festival committee is seeking volunteer support from the community.”

A volunteer meeting was called for May 25 at the South Central Park Pavilion and more volunteers will be needed. Check The North Ridgeville Corn Festival facebook page or nrcornfest.org for upcoming info.

pice organization managed Mom’s medicines and provided guidance for her care.

I knew about Redwood Apartments in Newark because my son lives there and loves his place. The layout works well for him with the second bedroom turned into a home office and the large windows providing a spacious feeling.

Our Redwood neighbors were friendly and helpful. On nice-weather days I moved Mom in her wheelchair to the edge of the garage and folks driving by smiled and waved. Neighbors out for a stroll or on their way to the mailbox stopped to greet us and held their dogs up for Mom to pet. Everyone offered to help if I needed anything.

Mom relished living in Redwood Apartments; she loved when I moved her wheelchair into the kitchen so she could watch me prepare our next meal as we chatted about our adventures together. She liked having an audience for her stories and basked in receiving loving touches again. She said the arrangement was like a marvelous dream. We only had two months together, but Mom died knowing she was greatly loved.

Celebrating Our Past at the Library

In October 2007, Elyria artist David J. Pavlak was commissioned to paint 4 HUGE (and amazing) historical paintings (about 6' X 8' each), and they were installed at the 4-year-old North Ridgeville Branch Library on Bainbridge Road. All four paintings are hanging high above the floor, up near the ceiling, throughout the library.

And each painting shows a different aspect of the historical or agricultural heritage of Ridgeville Township, which is now (since 1960) the City of North Ridgeville.

Look UP for them next time you visit the Library! (Courtesy North Ridgeville Historical Society).

The District No. 9 "Snow Road" one-room schoolhouse, built in 1859 on what's now Jaycox Road, just south of Mill Road. Now a museum owned by the N.R. Historical Society, open for tours the LAST Sunday of each month, May to October, from 2:00 to 5:00 p.m. A 2007 painting by artist David J. Pavlak.

The Shawville railroad station on the north side of the tracks at Avon-Belden Road (formerly called Center Rd. or Station Rd., and later Route 76 and now Route 83). The station was in service from the 1850's to about 1948; and this station was moved in 1950 to Elyria, where it's now used as a small business. A 2007 painting by artist David J. Pavlak.

The C.C. Benjamin General Store at Fields Corners, Butternut Ridge (Lorain Rd.) and Root Road in the southern part of Ridgeville Township (now North Ridgeville). This store, like one or two others on the same site, was destroyed by fire and then replaced. A 2007 painting by artist David J. Pavlak, based on a circa 1912 photograph.
